Why we should learn German

John le Carré

To help make the European debate decent and civilised, it is now more important than ever to value the skills of the linguist

John le Carré in 2000. He began learning German aged 13. Photograph: Jane Bown for the Observer

And that's what language means to a linguist: Those who teach language, those who cherish its accuracy and meaning and beauty, are the custodians of truth in a dangerous age.

And if they teach German – and teach it in this my beleaguered country – they are quite particularly to be prized, all the more so because they are an endangered species.

By teaching German, by spreading understanding of German culture and life, today's honorands and their colleagues will be helping to balance the European argument, to make it decent, to keep it civilised.

They will be speaking above all to this country's most precious asset: its enlightened young, who – Brexit or no Brexit – see Europe as their natural home, Germany as their natural partner, and shared language as their natural bond.

British Council report: Languages of the future

It is a widely held - if not undisputed - view that the UK is lacking in the necessary language skills for the future, partly because of the status of English as the language of international communications.

1	Spanish
2	Arabic
3	French
4	Mandarin Chinese
5	German
6	Portuguese
7	Italian
8=	Russian
8=	Turkish
10	Japanese

The indicators used are:

1. current UK export trade
2. the language needs of UK business
3. UK government trade priorities
4. emerging high growth markets
5. diplomatic and security priorities
6. the public's language interests
7. outward visitor destinations
8. UK government's International Education Strategy priorities
9. levels of English proficiency in other countries
10. the prevalence of different languages on the internet.

Why study German at A- level?

"If I'm selling to you, I speak your language. If I'm buying, dann müssen Sie Deutsch sprechen."

Willy Brandt, former German Chancellor

1000 Coils of Fear - Tottenham Literature Festival 2022

© Bernia Grant Arts Centre, Town Hall Approach Road, N15 4RX
Tue 15th November 2022

I have more privilege than any person in my family. And I'm still screwed. Hear from acclaimed Afro-German author Olivia Wenzel as she discusses her award-winning novel, 1000 Coils of Fear. Described as 'exuberant, inventive, brainy, sensitive and hilarious', 1000 Coils of Fear is now translated from German to English, in partnership with Dialogue Books and supported by Goethe Institut.

About 1000 Coils of Fear:

A young woman attends a play about the Berlin Wall coming down, and is the only Black person in the audience. She is sitting with her boyfriend by a bathing lake, and four neo-Nazis show up. She is having sex with a stranger in New York, and Donald Trump wins the US presidential election. Engaging in a witty question and answer with herself, she takes stock of our rapidly changing times, sometimes angry, sometimes amused, sometimes afraid, and always passionate. And she tells the story of her family: her mother, a punk in former East Germany who never had the freedom she dreamed of; her Angolan father, who returned to his home country before she was born to start a second family; her grandmother, whose life of obedience to party principles brought her prosperity and security but not happiness. And her twin brother, who took his own life at the age of nineteen.

German Writing Competition

Wie bewältigen wir die Klimakrise?

Climate change is one of the most pressing problems of our time. Rising temperatures are fuelling natural disasters, weather extremes, food and water insecurity, economic disruption and conflict. Earlier this year, the UN Secretary-General António Guterres warned that 'we are in a life-or-death struggle [...] for our survival'. Yet greenhouse gas emissions remain at a record high.

What can be done, then, to tackle the climate crisis? Are governments and industrial leaders doing enough to reduce global warming? What steps can individuals take to reduce their carbon footprint? And is it too late to prevent the destruction of our planet?

The Department of Languages, Literature and Cultures at King's College London is seeking to publish one original piece of writing in German on this topic, written by a student of German in Year 12 or 13 (S5 or S6 in Scotland).

How to enter

Entries should be 400-450 words in length and written in German. The topic may be addressed from any angle; your submission may take the form of a discursive essay, or you may choose a more creative

Prizes

The author of the winning entry will receive a book token and will have their submission published in the Königspost, the German-language magazine produced by students at King's College London, which has a wide circulation among university students and language learners across the UK. Prizes will also be awarded to runners-up.

The winner and runners-up will be invited to a prize-giving ceremony and seminar at King's College London in early December 2022.
